

Imagine for a moment

getting lost on your way home, forgetting to turn off the stove or not remembering your favorite relative's name. These are typical moments for people who suffer from early- to mid-stage memory loss.

Recognizing that individuals with Alzheimer's disease, dementia and other memory loss problems have many needs, The Eddy began developing innovative services for dementia care in the 1980s. Today, our memory care communities in Cohoes and East Greenbush provide warm, homelike residences where dignity and independence come first.

A place to call home.

In 1997, The Eddy pioneered Alzheimer's education and residential care with our innovative Marjorie Doyle Rockwell Center in Cohoes. And, in 2006, we expanded that commitment with the opening of Eddy Alzheimer's Center at Hawthorne Ridge in East Greenbush.

Each community is thoughtfully designed for safety and independence, offering flexible schedules so residents can continue lifelong patterns and preferences; open and accessible country kitchens to encourage socialization; and interior corridors and outdoor garden pathways with continuous loops to prevent frustration and confusion.

Our residences serve individuals with early- to mid-stage Alzheimer's — those whose difficulties demand watchfulness and a supportive environment, but do not require skilled nursing home services.

A resource center at each community provides educational programs, support groups, family forums, professional conferences and workshops, and a lending library for caregivers and professionals.
